9.30am - Building a Library

Building a Library: Alexandra Coghlan recommends the best recording of Vaughan Williams's plea for peace, tolerance and understanding written in 1936, his Dona Nobis Pacem. The piece is on a huge scale, scored for soloists, chorus and large orchestra, in six continuous parts, and the phrase Dona nobis pacem "Give us peace" recurs throughout; a theme with perennial relevance.

SAT 12:15 Music Matters (b08xcl4l)

Music on the move

In the last Music Matters of the season, Sara Mohr-Pietsch introduces stories of people on the move: how music is affecting, and being affected by, the lives of refugees and migrants, from ancient ritual singing practices to hyper-directional opera, from instruments made out of buckets and string to the latest web technology.

The mezzo-soprano Joyce DiDonato tells Sara about her recent experience working with children in the Eleonas and Skaramagas refugee camps in Athens for El Sistema Greece, and how it ties in with her ongoing mission to tell stories of war and peace through the music of Handel and Purcell.

Sara also hears from three composers about their responses to today's migrant crisis: Dee Isaacs on a partnership between the universities of Edinburgh and Athens to take musical projects to children in the Athens camps, the Navajo-born artist Raven Chacon on using refugee stories from Greece and the American borderlands for a sound installation in the Greek capital, and Nigel Osborne on his new website and international movement, This Place is Our Place, which brings together communities in Scotland, Syria and Lebanon.

Sara also meets the violinist Mariela Shaker and pianist Riyad Nicolas, who both left their families in their home town of Aleppo to pursue musical careers in the UK and the US, and who now use music to tell stories of the continuing crisis in Syria.

And a new book which explores how ritual singing in Ireland creates a sense of belonging between immigrant and local communities. Sara talks to the book's Limerick-based author, Helen Phelan, and Toner Quinn, editor of the Journal of Music, puts 'Singing the Rite to Belong' in the wider context of Irish music-making.

SAT 13:00 Saturday Classics (b08xcmwy)

Rob Cowan's Gold Standard

Music by Brahms, Boccherini, Sibelius and Prokofiev from performers including Sergiu Celibidache, Salvatore Accardo and Fabio Biondi.

SAT 15:00 Sound of Dance (b08xcmx0)

Darcey Bussell

"The first thing you're told is listen, listen to the music - the music and the step are as one. As a child you're not always aware of this".

Katie Derham talks to a Darcey Bussell about a dancer's relationship with music. Darcey Bussell, as a Principal at the Royal Ballet for nearly twenty years and now a judge on Strictly Come Dancing, has prepared many roles for the stage, and also has a broad range of tastes in music. She looks back over her career, and to some of her earliest forays in dance, to consider some of the almost alchemical ways in which dancer and music interact. She offers suggestions of where music and dance are wonderfully matched in the work of others, not least in the partnership of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, and talks about some of her favourite and inspirational music for the ballet.

The programme features music for some of Darcey's great roles including from Romeo and Juliet; The Prince Of The Pagodas; Sylvia; and The Song Of The Earth.

Jonathan Swain

Jonathan Swain presents this week's Building a Library choice in full of Vaughan Williams's Dona Nobis Pacem. He also explores music connected with the tragedy of war from John Adams, Darius Milhaud and Arthur Honegger. The week's young artists are the Salaputia Brass from Germany and Switzerland, and the neglected classic is Granados's Escenas Romanticas.

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (b08xcq0t)

Dan Pearson

Dan Pearson discovered his passion for gardens very young, building landscapes for his toy trolls out of stones. He's now one of our most influential landscape designers, with work ranging from private gardens around the world - including Chatsworth - to the 600-acre Tokachi Forest Garden in northern Japan, and gardens in Manchester and London for the Cancer charity Maggie's. He's written five books, presented several television series, and exhibited at Chelsea six times, winning awards each time - last time, for Best in Show. He's known for his painterly naturalistic planting, or to put it more simply, he likes to create landscapes which look wild, and ancient. He says, "the way I garden is to let things go almost to the brink of being lost".

In Private Passions, Dan Pearson talks to Michael Berkeley about his love of wild plants, and the influence of a very neglected garden of a house he lived in as a child. He reveals how his gardens for cancer patients and his encounters with the people he's met there have changed his sense of what a garden means. He talks too about the way in which music inspires his landscape designs; he loves music which creates a sense of wide open space. Choices include Estonian composer Arvo Pärt; 12th-century polyphony; Spanish guitar music; the Bulgarian Trio Bulgarka and Moondog.

Live from York Early Music Festival 2017

Lucie Skeaping presents a live programme from the National Centre for Early Music, celebrating the 40th anniversary of the York Early Music Festival.

In addition to its own birthday the Festival is marking the anniversaries of Monteverdi and Telemann this year, as well as the Reformation with music by that great Lutheran JS Bach - today we'll hear some of his works for solo violin played live by Kati Debretzeni. The Ebor Singers who've enjoyed a long association with the festival also join us to sing live and discuss their latest project - exploring music from the English Civil War and Siege of York.

Extreme Voices

Whether it's an eye-wateringly high soprano or profoundly low bass, lightning quick rappers, the star castrati of the 18th century, the screamers, the growlers, the robots or the singers that can produce two notes at once - there are a lot of extreme voices out there.

Tom Service takes a trip through the many purveyors of vocal pyrotechnics from Mozart and Rachmaninov to Stockhausen, Tom Waits and Daft Punk, has a lesson in throat singing from overtone singer Michael Ormiston, and finds out whether we're all extreme singers at heart.

Literary Pursuits, Literary Pursuits: EM Forster's Maurice

Forster's gay love story was a forbidden book. Written in 1913, inspired by a touch on the buttocks, 'Maurice' was only published in 1971 after Forster died. Nevertheless, for almost sixty years, it was a secret manuscript, clandestinely circulating among those Forster trusted. They included Lytton Strachey, Leonard Woolf, Siegfried Sassoon and Christopher Isherwood. Isherwood's comments especially prompted Forster to re-write, adding a sex scene and altering the ending. But for years he refused Isherwood's pressure to publish, until finally acquiescing to a posthumous publication, and sending the typescript by trusted couriers from Cambridge to America. Biographer Wendy Moffat talks about how she pieced together the details of this journey, scholar Philip Gardner looks at the manuscript changes and writer Peter Parker discusses Isherwood's influence on the finished novel.

SUN 21:00 Drama on 3 (b08xcqwp)
Victim

by Sarah Wooley.

A drama about the making of 'Victim', the first British film to seriously address homosexuality. This programme is part of Gay Britannia, a season across the BBC marking the 50th anniversary of The Sexual Offences Act 1967.

The 1961 film, starring matinee idol Dirk Bogarde in the gamble of his career, is often credited with helping to change public attitudes to homosexuality. This fast-moving drama follows the extraordinary mixture of bravery and pragmatism involved in getting this groundbreaking enterprise off the ground, providing a fascinating glimpse of Britain at a tipping point of social change.

THE WRITER

Sarah Wooley has written many plays for the radio including FIFTEEN MINUTES about Andy Warhol, MOVING MUSIC about Philip Glass and Steve Reich, PLANNING PERMISSION about the Brutalist architect Erno Goldfinger and A NICE LITTLE HOLIDAY about playwright John Osborne. Her last play for Radio 4 was 1977, about the scoring of the film 'Watership Down' and the story of trans composer Angela Morley.

Her stage plays are published by Oberon and include the sell-out hit OLD MONEY, which ran at Hampstead Theatre main stage in 2012 and starred Maureen Lipman.

MON 09:00 Essential Classics (b08xcsp5)

Monday - Sarah Walker with Wasfi Kani

9am

Sarah sets the tone and mood of the day's programme with a range of music to intrigue, surprise and entertain.

9.30

Take part in today's musical challenge: can you remember the television show or film that featured this piece of classical music?

10am

Sarah's guest this week is the opera impresario Wasfi Kani. Wasfi is one of the UK's leading opera organisers and fundraisers, and the founder of Pimlico Opera and Grange Park Opera. After studying music at the University of Oxford she worked as a computer programmer in the City, before realising she wanted to return to music. She founded Pimlico Opera with the aim of using music and drama for the public good, and it was one of the first opera companies to specialise in performing in unusual places, such as hospitals, banks and prisons. Grange Park Opera has become one of the UK's most successful summer opera companies and is currently enjoying its first season at a brand-new theatre in Surrey. As a pianist, violinist and conductor, much of the music that Wasfi has chosen for the week is music that she's played herself, including music by Schubert, Richard Strauss and Mozart.

10.30

Music on Location: London
Sarah explores one of London's most conspicuous premieres.
Handel's Water Music was first performed on a barge floating up the River Thames in 1717, accompanying King George I and his guests as they journeyed into the night.

11am

Sarah's featured artist is one of Britain's most celebrated living conductors, Edward Gardner. Gardner is currently Chief Conductor of the Bergen Philharmonic Orchestra, but has spent much of his career in the opera house. From 2007-2015 he was Music Director at English National Opera and during this time he won the RPS Conductor of the Year Award and an Olivier Award for Outstanding Achievement in Opera. His big breakthrough came when he stood in at short notice for a répétiteur at the Salzburg Festival, and from there he went on to be Music Director of Glyndebourne Touring Opera. He regularly works with the National Youth Orchestra and the BBC Symphony Orchestra (BBCSO) with whom he led the Last Night of the Proms in 2011. Sarah's chosen four of Gardner's recordings with the BBCSO: recordings of Walton's Symphony No.1, Szymanowski's Symphony No. 4 'Symphonie Concertante' (with pianist Louis Lortie), Britten's Violin Concerto with Tasmin Little, and Lutoslawski's song cycle Chantefleurs et Chantefables with soprano Lucy Crowe. She's also chosen his recording of Schoenberg's Gurrelieder (Part III) with an array of musicians drawn from Norway, Sweden and the UK.

Olivier Messiaen (1908-1992), A Student in Paris

Donald Macleod explores Olivier Messiaen's student days in Paris

Olivier Messiaen was the single most important contributor to the organ repertoire in the twentieth century. He took up learning the organ whilst he was a student in Paris, and was fortunate to hear virtuoso organists around the city, including Louis Vierne, Charles Tournemire, Charles-Marie Widor and Marcel Dupré.
Aged just twenty-two, he succeeded Charles Quef as titular organist at the Sainte-Trinité in Paris. Messiaen remained in this post for over sixty years, composing many solo works for the organ that pushed the instrument to its very limits. He rose to become one of the leading composers in France, and also a worldwide musical celebrity. This week Donald Macleod focuses each day on one specific organ work Messiaen composed, whilst exploring the period in which it was written along with those other instrumental works from the same time.

Olivier Messiaen didn't come from a musical background. He taught himself the piano and at the age of eleven started attending classes at the Paris Conservatoire. Amongst his earliest works are his Preludes for solo piano, composed in the aftermath of his mother's death. By 1930 Messiaen had won the conservatoire's First Prize for composition. In that same year he composed his work for solo organ, Diptyque, which he described as an essay on earthly life and eternal happiness in two parts. Messiaen's faith would always be a key part of his life, and integral to his music.
In that same year, 1930, he composed a cantata about transcendence, La mort du nombre, exploring the relationship between human time and eternal time, between music and silence.

Live from Wigmore Hall, London

Presented by Sara Mohr-Pietsch

Bass-baritone Hanno Müller-Brachmann sings Mahler with Hendrik Heilmann at the piano.

Mahler: Kindertotenlieder
Mahler: Rückert Lieder

Hanno Müller-Brachmann (bass-baritone)
Hendrik Heilmann (piano)

Hanno Müller-Brachmann and Hendrik Heilmann venture into the complex emotional territories of Mahler's song cycles to poems by Friedrich Rückert.
Kindertotenlieder, first performed in 1905, deals with the grief unlocked by the death of two of the poet's children, while the five Rückert Lieder reveal the psychological insight and captivating beauty of Mahler's intensely romantic music.

Emile Parisien

The French saxophonist Emile Parisien was one of the stars of last year's London Jazz Festival and he has been described by Le Monde as "the best new thing that has happened in European jazz for a long time". Tonight, Soweto Kinch presents a full festival set by Parisien's quintet from the Saalfelden Jazz Festival, with special guests pianist Joachim Kühn and clarinettist Michel Portal joining guitarist Manu Codjia, bassist Simon Tailleu and percussionists Mario Costa and Wolfgang Reisinger. They play new music from Parisien's latest album "Sfumato" as well as original compositions by Kühn and Portal. Also in tonight's show, Soweto talks to legendary drummer Peter Erskine about the release of a newly discovered concert by bassist Jaco Pastorius and his "Word of Mouth" big band.

Tuesday - Sarah Walker with Wasfi Kani

9am
Sarah sets the tone and mood of the day's programme with a range of music to intrigue, surprise and entertain.

9.30
Take part in today's musical challenge: identify a piece of music played in reverse.

10am
Sarah's guest this week is the opera impresario Wasfi Kani. Wasfi is one of the UK's leading opera organisers and fundraisers, and the founder of Pimlico Opera and Grange Park Opera. After studying music at the University of Oxford she worked as a computer programmer in the City, before realising she wanted to return to music. She founded Pimlico Opera with the aim of using music and drama for the public good, and it was one of the first opera companies to specialise in performing in unusual places, such as hospitals, banks and prisons. Grange Park Opera has become one of the UK's most successful summer opera companies and is currently enjoying its first season at a brand-new theatre in Surrey. As a pianist, violinist and conductor, much of the music that Wasfi has chosen for the week is music that she's played herself, including music by Schubert, Richard Strauss and Mozart.

10.30
Music on Location: London
Following the popularity of his London Suite, Eric Coates wrote a second, the London Again Suite. Sarah explores this trio of London vignettes, which portrays Oxford Street, Langham Place and Mayfair.

Double Take
Sarah explores the nature of performance by highlighting the differences in style between two recordings of Mahler's song 'Es sungen drei Engel einen süßen Gesang' (There were three angels singing a sweet song) - one in a version for choir and orchestra, part of his Third Symphony, and the other for voice and piano.

11am
Sarah's featured artist is one of Britain's most celebrated living conductors, Edward Gardner. Gardner is currently Chief Conductor of the Bergen Philharmonic Orchestra, but has spent much of his career in the opera house. From 2007-2015 he was Music Director at English National Opera and during this time he won the RPS Conductor of the Year Award and an Olivier Award for Outstanding Achievement in Opera. His big breakthrough came when he stood in at short notice for a répétiteur at the Salzburg Festival, and from there he went on to be Music Director of Glyndebourne Touring Opera. He regularly works with the National Youth Orchestra and the BBC Symphony Orchestra (BBCSO) with whom he led the Last Night of the Proms in 2011. Sarah's chosen four of Gardner's recordings with the BBCSO: recordings of Walton's Symphony No.1, Szymanowski's Symphony No. 4 'Symphonie Concertante' (with pianist Louis Lortie), Britten's Violin Concerto with Tasmin Little, and Lutoslawski's song cycle Chantefleurs et Chantefables with soprano Lucy Crowe. She's also chosen his recording of Schoenberg's Gurrelieder (Part III) with an array of musicians drawn from Norway, Sweden and the UK.

Olivier Messiaen (1908-1992), Working at the Sainte-Trinité

The devil's voice is heard in Messiaen's music presented by Donald Macleod

Olivier Messiaen was the single most important contributor to the organ repertoire in the twentieth century. He took up learning the organ whilst he was a student in Paris, and was fortunate to hear virtuoso organists around the city including Louis Vierne, Charles Tournemire, Charles-Marie Widor and Marcel Dupré. Aged just twenty-two, he succeeded Charles Quef as titular organist at the Sainte-Trinité in Paris. Messiaen remained in this post for over sixty years, composing many solo works for the organ that pushed the instrument to its very limits. He rose to become one of the leading composers in France, and also a worldwide musical celebrity. This week Donald Macleod focuses each day on one specific organ work Messiaen composed, whilst exploring the period in which it was written along with those other instrumental works from the same time.

In 1931 Messiaen was appointed the youngest titular organist in Paris, at Sainte-Trinité. Members of the congregation were alarmed by his occasional adventurous and dissonant improvisation at the organ, and some claimed they could hear the devil's voice emerging from the organ pipes. It was in these early years, after leaving his studies at the Paris Conservatoire, that he composed his orchestral work Le tombeau resplendissant. Messiaen said of this work that he wanted to write a kind of Beatitude for those who discover in their faith something more than the illusion of distant youth. The following year, 1932, he married the violinist Claire Delbos, who was the daughter of a professor at the Sorbonne University. His wedding gift to his new bride was a chamber work, a Theme and Variations for them both to play together on the violin and piano. By 1934 Messiaen had completed a new work for solo organ called L'Ascension. Originally for orchestra, he transcribed this piece for organ adding a new third movement. Like so many of his compositions, L'Ascension is deeply rooted within Messiaen's own Christian beliefs.

The Sixteen - Palestrina and Poulenc

Adam Tomlinson presents a concert of sacred works by Poulenc and Palestrina, given by The Sixteen and director Harry Christophers in the magnificent York Minster as part of their Choral Pilgrimage and this year's York Early Music Festival. Palestrina and Poulenc: two sacred masters separated by four centuries. Palestrina's Mass L'Homme Armé is based on the popular song of the same name - a 16th-century reminder of the horror of war. Conflict also inspired Poulenc, who was deeply affected by the death of his composer friend Pierre-Octave Ferroud in an horrific car accident. His Salve Regina - one of a pair of motets - quietly expresses conveys reverence, penitence and, ultimately, hope. In contrast, Un soir de neige, composed in December 1944, juxtaposes the brutal beauty of nature with death and coldness - reflecting no doubt another bleak winter of occupation in his native France. The concluding 'Angus Dei' of his Mass in G also lays to rest any accusations of compositional flippancy, with its serene final utterance of "Dona nobis pacem" ("give us peace").

Poulenc: Salve Regina
Palestrina: Surge amica mea; Parce mihi, Domine; Surgam et circumibo civitatem

Poulenc: Quatre motets pour un temps de pénitence Palestrina: Peccantem me quotidie; Kyrie and Gloria from Missa L'Homme Armé

Poulenc: Un Soir de neige
Palestrina: Credo from Missa L'Homme Armé; Salve Regina
Poulenc: Agnus Dei from Mass in G

He was referred to as the Atomic Bomb of Contemporary Music. In the summer of 1945 he turned his attention to a song cycle called Harawi, exploring themes of Love and Death. These songs may have been inspired by his wife Claire who was now seriously ill, or by a new woman in his life, the pianist Yvonne Loriod. Similar to his Peruvian folklore-inspired choral work Cinq Rechants from a few years later, Harawi is in part based on the Quechua language of Peru. By 1947, Messiaen returned to the Paris Conservatoire as a teacher. Pierre Boulez, Karlheinz Stockhausen, George Benjamin and even Quincy Jones were all taught by him at some point. Just a few years later, after a gap of some ten years, Messiaen returned to writing music for the organ with his Livre d'orgue. It is a pioneering work which pushes the instruments boundaries to the very limits. In this music Messiaen was keen to abolish our perception of time by employing heterophony, where several musical structures proceed alongside each other without perceptible coordination. Chant des déportés BBC Symphony Chorus BBC Symphony Orchestra Andrew Davis, conductor L'Amour de Piroutcha (Harawi) Rachel Yakar, soprano Yvonne Loriod, piano Cinq Rechants RIAS Chamber Choir Daniel Reuss, director Livre d'orgue (5th - 7th mvts) Hans-Ola Ericsson, organ Producer Luke Whitlock. WED 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (b08xcw0w) East Neuk Festival 2017, Belcea Quartet, Thomas Oliemans, Malcolm Martineau Festival artists the Belcea Quartet, Malcolm Martineau (piano) and Thomas Oliemans (baritone) bring a Schubertiade to the East Neuk festival, featuring Schubert's most well-loved 'Death and the Maiden' Quartet and songs written in 1816. Schubert: String Quartet in D minor, D810 'Death and the Maiden' Belcea Quartet Schubert: Der Wanderer Schubert: An den Mond Schubert: Wandrers Nachtlied II Thomas Oliemans, baritone Malcolm Martineau, piano Presenter - Tom Redmond Producer - Laura Metcalfe. WED 14:00 Afternoon on 3 (b08xcw7n) Wednesday - BBC Symphony Orchestra Ian Skelly introduces highlights from the BBC Symphony Orchestra's trip to the Kissinger Sommer Festival in Germany and some music from an award winning CD recording featuring the baritone Matthias Goerne Mendelssohn: The Hebrides (Fingal's Cave) - Overture, Op.26 BBC Symphony Orchestra Sakari Oramo (conductor) Recorded at the Kissinger Sommer Festival 2:10pm Mahler/Berio: Frühe Lieder Matthias Goerne (baritone) BBC Symphony Orchestra Josep Pons (conductor) 2:40pm Tchaikovsky: Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Op. 36 BBC Symphony Orchestra Sakari Oramo (conductor) Recorded at the Kissinger Sommer Festival. WED 15:30 Choral Evensong (b08xcxn7) Royal Holloway, University of London Recorded in the Chapel of Royal Holloway, University of London Introit: Abendlied (Rheinberger) Responses: Ayleward Psalms 65, 66, 67 (Walmisley, Attwood, Pike) First Lesson: Wisdom of Solomon 7 vv.7-10, 15 Deutsches Magnificat (Schütz)	Second Lesson: Luke 18 vv.15-30 Nunc Dimittis (Hammerschmidt) Anthem: Geistliches Lied (Brahms) Hymn: The duteous day now closeth (Innsbruck) Organ Voluntary: Passacaglia in D minor (Buxtehude) Rupert Gough - Director of Choral Music James Furniss-Roe - Senior Organ Scholar. WED 16:30 In Tune (b08xcwk1) Wednesday - Sean Rafferty Sean Rafferty presents a lively mix of music, chat and arts news. And in the second half, Simon Rattle brings to London what he calls "An eccentric journey through Haydn ...The idea is to make a musical journey through all that is quirky and extraordinary, humorous and profound in Haydn. Hopefully this pasticcio will give a picture of the composer who most summed up all the ideals of the Enlightenment, of intelligence, respect, humour, wit and profound thought." Friday - Sarah Walker with Wasfi Kani

9am

Sarah sets the tone and mood of the day's programme with a range of music to intrigue, surprise and entertain.

9.30

Take part in today's musical challenge: two pieces of music are played together - can you identify them?

10am

Sarah's guest this week is the opera impresario Wasfi Kani. Wasfi is one of the UK's leading opera organisers and fundraisers, and the founder of Pimlico Opera and Grange Park Opera. After studying music at the University of Oxford she worked as a computer programmer in the City, before realising she wanted to return to music. She founded Pimlico Opera with the aim of using music and drama for the public good, and it was one of the first opera companies to specialise in performing in unusual places, such as hospitals, banks and prisons. Grange Park Opera has become one of the UK's most successful summer opera companies and is currently enjoying its first season at a brand-new theatre in Surrey. As a pianist, violinist and conductor, much of the music that Wasfi has chosen for the week is music that she's played herself, including music by Schubert, Richard Strauss and Mozart.

10.30

Music on Location: London
Sarah explores the last of Haydn's 'London Symphonies', one of the twelve symphonies written for the composer's celebrated and lucrative visits to the city.

11am

Sarah's featured artist is one of Britain's most celebrated living conductors, Edward Gardner. Gardner is currently Chief Conductor of the Bergen Philharmonic Orchestra, but has spent much of his career in the opera house. From 2007-2015 he was Music Director at English National Opera and during this time he won the RPS Conductor of the Year Award and an Olivier Award for Outstanding Achievement in Opera. His big breakthrough came when he stood in at short notice for a répétiteur at the Salzburg Festival, and from there he went on to be Music Director of Glyndebourne Touring Opera. He regularly works with the National Youth Orchestra and the BBC Symphony Orchestra (BBCSO) with whom he led the Last Night of the Proms in 2011. Sarah's chosen four of Gardner's recordings with the BBCSO: recordings of Walton's Symphony No.1, Szymanowski's Symphony No. 4 'Symphonie Concertante' (with pianist Louis Lortie), Britten's Violin Concerto with Tasmin Little, and Lutoslawski's song cycle Chantefleurs et Chantefables with soprano Lucy Crowe. She's also chosen his recording of Schoenberg's Gurrelieder (Part III) with an array of musicians drawn from Norway, Sweden and the UK.

FRI 12:00 Composer of the Week (b08xcvvy2)

Olivier Messiaen (1908-1992). Inspired by the Music of Mozart

Donald Macleod delves into Olivier Messiaen's love for the music of Mozart

Olivier Messiaen was the single most important contributor to the organ repertoire in the twentieth century. He took up learning the organ whilst he was a student in Paris, and was fortunate to hear virtuoso organists around the city including Louis Vierne, Charles Tournemire, Charles-Marie Widor and Marcel Dupré. Aged just twenty-two, he succeeded Charles Quef as titular organist at the Sainte-Trinité in Paris. Messiaen remained in this post for over sixty years, composing many solo works for the organ that pushed the instrument to its very limits. He rose to become one of the leading composers in France, and also a worldwide musical celebrity. This week Donald Macleod focuses each day on one specific organ work Messiaen composed, whilst exploring the period in which it was written along with those other instrumental works from the same time.

Mozart was one of Messiaen's favourite composers, and he created a number of works inspired by Mozart including The Smile, Chant dans le style de Mozart and Concert à quatre. That final work for full orchestra Messiaen left incomplete, and it was finished by the composer's wife Yvonne Loriod in consultation with the oboist Heinz Holliger, and one of Messiaen's former pupils, the composer George Benjamin. Although in his final years Messiaen had to give up teaching at the Paris Conservatoire, he did remain organist at the Sainte-Trinité in Paris where a hand rail was even put in place to help Messiaen reach the organ loft. In that decade before his death, Messiaen composed another monumental work for the organ, Livre du Saint Sacrement, which was another work very much connected with the composer's deep-rooted Christian faith.

It is our last programme before we go on our summer holidays, so to celebrate the end of the season Ian McMillan makes his maiden voyage to the Glastonbury Festival, where he investigates the festival as utopia and takes on a poetry challenge to write and perform a poem infused with the spirit of the festival.

Along the way he'll be aided with writing advice from folk singer Kathryn Williams, Squeeze songwriter Chris Difford and up-and-coming Grime artist Nadia Rose, as well as hearing from a host of spoken word performers at the Poetry & Words tent, and talking crustaceans with Glastonbury cult favourite 'Lekiddo - Lord of the Lobsters!'

FRI 22:45 The Essay (b08xcx4b)

The Love that Wrote Its Name, Colquhoun and MacBryde: More Lasting than Life

Novelist Louise Welsh on the life, love, the rise and the fall of Scottish artists Robert Colquhoun and Robert MacBryde. The two Roberts, as they came to be known, met in 1933, as students at Glasgow School of Art. They were together until their early deaths; Colquhoun at the age of forty-seven, MacBryde four years later at the age of fifty-three. Their relationship endured their meteoric rise as fashionable artists and their eventual fall from grace as post-war tastes in art began to change.

Part of Gay Britannia, a season of programming marking the 50th anniversary of The Sexual Offences Act 1967, which partially decriminalised homosexual acts that took place in private between two men over the age of 21.
