Hannah French compares recordings of Vivaldi's set of 12 concertos, Op.3, better known as L'estro armonico - and picks a favourite.

Vivaldi's reputation across Europe was at its height in 1711 when the Amsterdam-based publisher Estienne Roger published twelve of his concertos for strings as Opus 3 under the title L'estro armonico. The popularity of L'estro armonico was instant and new editions soon appeared in London and Paris. Quantz was impressed by the novelty of Vivaldi's Op.3 and J.S. Bach arranged a dozen of them for keyboard instruments. The 12 concertos together put on a dazzling display of virtuosity, baroque drama, rhythmic energy and intense harmonic development. L'estro armonico, which translates roughly as 'musical rapture', encapsulates Vivaldi's inventiveness in the collection as a whole.

SAT 11:45 Music Matters (m000g3wd)

Game-changers

Tom Service interviews Norwegian soprano Lise Davidsen, who at the age of 33 is a phenomenon of vocal nature and is critically acclaimed for her performances of Wagner and Strauss. On the eve of International Women's Day 2020, we talk to Alice Farnham who launched what has become the RPS Women Conductors course back in 2014. She assesses how things have changed since and what the expectations are of young female conductors wishing to develop a career at the podium. Music Matters also hears from Professor John Richardson and researcher Jelena Novak about their new book, 'Einstein on the Beach - opera beyond drama', which assesses the legacy of Philip Glass's landmark piece across all arts and popular culture. And Tom learns about Denis and Katya - a collaboration between composer Philip Venables and director and writer Ted Huffmann - another boundary-pushing opera that explores the story of a couple of Russian teenagers who committed suicide on social media after a stand-off with the police.

SAT 13:00 Inside Music (m000g4vy)

Creative connections with fiddle-singer and composer Nancy Kerr

Nancy Kerr is a multi-award-winning fiddle-singer and songwriter. As a musician she brings her own individual take to traditional folk material and as a writer she combines folk mythology with tales of 21st-century life.

Today Nancy chooses pieces that highlight the lines of connection between some wildly different musical styles, including Bartok dances played first by the Budapest Festival Orchestra, and then the Romani group Taraf De Haïdouks. There's also Gaelic music inspired by masters of the Italian baroque, and a song by Vaughan Williams that goes back to its earthy roots.

Plus romantic pieces for violin and piano by Dvorak, an orchestral favourite by Gustav Holst and some brain-taxing miniatures by JS Bach.

A series in which each week a musician explores a selection of music - from the inside.

SAT 18:30 Opera on 3 (m000g4w6)

From the Met

Mozart - Così fan tutte

When Don Alfonso overhears two military men, Ferrando and Guglielmo, boasting of their respective lovers' (sisters Fiordiligi and Dorabella) rock-solid fidelity, he easily persuades them to put it to the test. And guess what? It doesn't take long after the two soldiers have apparently gone off to war before two Albanian brothers appear (Ferrando and Guglielmo, of course) who each successfully seduces each other's girlfriend.

As a plot it's not up to much. But the opera, whose cynically misogynist title translates as 'They're All Like That', has survived because it contains some of Mozart's greatest music, including unforgettable solo arias and ensembles wrapped up in some in wonderful orchestration. Mozart's achievement is to make us believe in these otherwise two-dimensional characters as flesh-and-blood human beings, subject to genuine and painful emotions.

As ever, The Met fields a starry international cast. Today's performance from the New York Metropolitan Opera House is presented by Mary Jo Heath and Ira Siff.

SUN 09:00 Sunday Morning (m000g67g)

Sarah Walker on International Women's Day

Sarah Walker chooses three hours of attractive and uplifting music to complement your morning, and puts a musical spin on International Women's Day.

This morning Sarah plays a selection of music written by women whose creativity is as varied as their individual lives.

She discovers pieces by medieval spiritual leaders, and women who navigated the tricky courtly environments and restraints of the 17th and 18th centuries. There's a focus on 20th-century female pioneers who ignored family advice to follow their own path, tackled the 'boys club' of mischievous Parisian iconoclasts or became queens of the jazz scene.

Sarah also celebrates previously unknown sonatas and concertos that have only recently been recorded, and enjoys timeless songs that (perhaps) only a woman could have written.

Women Composers Compilation

As part of Radio 3's celebration of female composers, Michael Berkeley draws together some of his guests who have championed works by women.

Turner Prize-winner Helen Cammock introduces the 17th-century Venetian composer Barbara Strozzi, and actor Greta Scacchi tells the story of her discovery of the 18th-century musician and composer Maria Cosway. There is music too by Hildegard of Bingen, the 12th-century writer, abbess and mystic, who is a role model for scientist Uta Frith; and a discussion of Clara Schumann and her complex relationship with husband Robert from biographer Lucasta Miller.

Architect Daniel Libeskind champions the work of the Finnish composer Kaija Saariaho, whose work for him conjures up the glittering beauty of modern glass buildings. And Michael Berkeley reveals the answer to the question he's frequently asked about this programme: which composer gets chosen most often? And the answer is that, apart from Bach, probably the most popular choice of all at the moment - from men, women, young, old, artists, scientists, writers - is Nina Simone.

SUN 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (m000g67i)

Seven Ages of Woman

To mark International Women's Day 2020, BBC Radio 3 has commissioned seven very different composers to write a movement each of an a cappella choral work entitled 'Seven Ages of Woman'. Each composer represents her own decade, from Helena Paish in her teens, to Rhian Samuel who gracefully brings the piece to its culmination. Featuring texts by beloved poet Charlotte Brontë, to Francophile Heather Dohollau, who was born in Wales but moved to France and died only seven years ago; from Deirdre Gribbin's son's striking poem about mortality in the form of an elephant graveyard, to Emily Hall's choice of Russian poet Marina Tsvetaeva's poem celebrating the unending life-force that flows through her veins. Each woman gives their individual take on where they are in their lives - right now as a woman in 2020 - and the resulting piece of music as a whole will take listeners on a journey through time of mind, body and soul. A reflection of female brilliance and resilience for the new decade. The composers are fearless in tackling issues they face as women head on, and you will hear them delve deep into the thoughts behind their choices during the programme.

In this programme you will hear each composer introduce their piece before a short music clip. We will then hear the work as a whole - for this groundbreaking commission deserves a second hearing.

SUN 17:00 The Listening Service (m000drdl)

The music of Kaija Saariaho

Tom Service takes an introductory journey through the beguiling sound world of Kaija Saariaho.

Finnish-born, Paris-based Saariaho's music, at once dark and dazzling, immediate and sensual, has ensured her position as one of the world's leading living composers. From operas which explore the big human themes, to orchestral and instrumental works which fuse electronic and acoustic sounds, her voice is completely distinctive and instantly recognisable, a triumph of extraordinary imagination and determination over an unpromising family background.

David Papp (producer)

SUN 18:45 Sunday Feature (m000g67v)

Queen of Technicolor

Famed for playing fiery, feisty characters and the great beauty that would see her dubbed 'Queen of Technicolor', Irish actress Maureen O'Hara had a complex relationship with Hollywood. On the one hand, she became one of the biggest stars of the 1940s and 50s thanks to gaudy swashbucklers and her frequent collaborations with director John Ford and lifelong friend John Wayne, with whom she starred in Ford's 1952 classic 'The Quiet Man'

However, she came to deeply resent being cast for her beauty and striking looks and longed for the serious 'character' roles of her early career, launched by English actor Charles Laughton, who had cast as Esmerelda in the 1939 epic 'The Hunchback Of Notre Dame'

100 years on from her birth, Marie-Louise Muir explores how O'Hara fought against the men who controlled her life, took on the Hollywood gossip industry single-handedly - and successfully - and spoke out against the casting couch culture 70 years before the #metoo movement.

In Boise Idaho, Marie-Louise meets Maureen's grandson Conor, who shares personal memories of his grandmother and some of his vast collection of memorabilia, including love letters from John Ford sent during the filming of 'The Quiet Man'

In Los Angeles, O'Hara's friend and biographer Johnny Nicholetti explains why Maureen was never afraid to fight her corner, even against some of the movie industry's most powerful people, while author Cari Beauchamp frames O'Hara in the wider Hollywood story, which had once been a hub of creative, powerful women before 'the men with the money took over'. Long-term friend Stefanie Powers, who starred in McClintock! (1963) alongside Maureen and John Wayne, remembers a woman fiercely proud of her Irish roots who had little time for the Hollywood life, while 'Little Women' star Saoirse Ronan reflects on Maureen's legacy and influence on the current generation of young Irish actors.

Archive recordings of Maureen herself and extracts from her most celebrated films also appear throughout this Sunday Feature, a compelling new portrait of a true Hollywood icon 100 years after her birth.

SUN 19:30 Drama on 3 (m000g67x)

Only Mountains

Original Drama by Maxine Peake

When Pearl chooses Istanbul as the destination for her best friend's hen do, it isn't just the beautiful location that draws her there. While in Istanbul, Pearl meets people from the Kurdish community and her political convictions are strengthened through her encounters. But when she makes the controversial decision to join the YPJ, an all-female Kurdish militia fighting on the brutal frontline in Rojava against the Islamic State group, will her friends be able to change her mind?

Pearl.....Lyndsey Marshal
Berglin/Layla.....Shaniaz Hama Ali
Ruth.....Dawn Sievewright
Nesrin/Herwaz/Medya/Havin.....Arazou Baker
Jess.....Carla Henry
Tahlia.....Mercedes Assad
Salar.....Murat Erkek

Directed by Nadia Molinari

The drama follows a young British woman, Pearl, and her journey into becoming a member of the YPJ- an all-female Kurdish militia actively fighting on the brutal frontline in Syria to overthrow Islamic State group and create a new feminist democratic society. The drama explores what triggers Pearl to make the decision to join the YPJ, the risks she is prepared to take for her political convictions and the contentiousness around her decision. It questions the root of the ultimate sacrifice of putting your life on the line for your beliefs, especially when the battle is waged on foreign soil. It is a fictionalised account although based on detailed research with real people and organisations.

Heroic Strokes of the Bow

Two UK premieres on show tonight: sparky Firelights by Elisabetta Brusa, and Victoria Borisova-Ollas's dream-like sound world in The Kingdom of Silence which explores "that mysterious country where we all should go to after our lifetime". Alexandra Dariescu is the soloist in the inventive Ballade for piano and orchestra by Germaine Tailleferre (1892-1983), the only woman member of Les Six, the group of composers in 1920s Paris which included Poulenc, Honegger and Milhaud.

The concert finishes with Heroic Strokes of the bow by Judith Weir, Master of the Queen's Music. This is the composer's response to Paul Klee's painting of the same name - "a blue and black painting on pink newspaper....which seems to show a simple pattern of violin bows and pegs against a hypnotic blue background."

The conductor is Stefan Solyom, Principal Conductor and Artistic Adviser of the Helsingborg Symfoniorkester, Sweden.

Leokadiya Kashperova's Second Cello Sonata

Leokadiya Kashperova: Cello Sonata No 2 in E minor, Op 1 No 2 (c. 1896) - a world premiere.

Anastasia Kobekina and Luka Okros give the specially recorded premiere performance in modern times of this work of rich Russian romanticism. An important figure in St Petersburg musical life - not least as 'the finest' pupil of Anton Rubinstein and the piano teacher of one Igor Stravinsky - the score of Kashperova's lyrical sonata was forgotten about after the Revolution of 1916. Thanks to the detective work of the musicologist Graham Griffiths and colleagues in the St Petersburg archives, the work has been edited and performed here for the first time by current BBC New Generation Artist, Anastasia Kobekina and the the Georgian-born pianist, Luka Okros. This sonata must surely rank as one of the most assured Opus 1's in musical history so it's not surprising that Kashperova was once the toast of St Petersburg musical life.

Beethoven Unleashed: At Home

Hearing Aids

Donald Macleod visits Beethoven's birthplace with Erica Buurman to view a collection of Beethoven's mechanical hearing aids and discuss the effects of his ongoing hearing loss.

This week, Donald Macleod takes us to Beethoven's home town of Bonn and the Beethoven-Haus museum which now occupies the building where he was born. Donald is joined by Erica Buurman, director of the Ira F. Brilliant Center for Beethoven

Studies, and together they explore some of the everyday objects and household artefacts owned by the composer to see what they can tell us about how he lived.

Composer of the Week will be returning to the story of Beethoven's life and music throughout 2020. Part of Radio 3's Beethoven Unleashed season marking the 250th anniversary of Beethoven's birth.

MON 14:00 Afternoon Concert (m000g3vq)

Ulster Orchestra at Ulster Hall (1/4)

Tom McKinney presents a week with the Ulster Orchestra.

The week begins with a concert given at the end of January in Belfast's Ulster Hall in which Gemma New conducts a programme packed full of melodic sparkle and loaded with enough rhythm to help you dance your way through the end of the winter months! Stravinsky's Dances concertantes was composed as a concert piece, but with the input of a choreographer – just listen and imagine the poses and gestures of a corps de ballet. Jacques Ibert's Concerto for Flute is one of the repertoire's great showpieces for the instrument, and Adam Walker (Principal Flautist of the London Symphony Orchestra) is the perfect agile and elegant soloist.

Taking its heritage from both medieval music and the tradition of 20th-century work such as Barber's Adagio for Strings, Aaron Jay Kernis's Musica Celestis is shimmering, hymn-like and utterly tranquil. And they close with Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony - a musical postcard from the happy, buoyant composer as he travelled in the Mediterranean. It's imbued with the sunshine of Italy and draws on traditional Italian dances such as the saltarello and tarantella for its fizzing finale.

The penultimate piece in today's programme is Richard Strauss' 1896 tone poem "Also Sprach Zarathustra". Inspired by Nietzsche's philosophical novel of the same name, Strauss explores the development of humankind, from the Birth of Reason in the famous opening Sunrise through to the piece's enigmatic end – the question of the balance between humanity and the universe is explored, but not resolved.

The orchestra closes with Leopold Stokowski's vibrant orchestration of one of JS Bach's most well-known organ pieces - the Passacaglia & Fugue in C minor. They're joined by the Charles Wood Singers under the baton of David Hill.

Beethoven Unleashed: At Home

Money Box

Donald Macleod visits Beethoven's birthplace museum with Erica Buurman to examine Beethoven's personal cashbox and talk about his relationship with money and the world of business.

This week, Donald Macleod takes us to Beethoven's home town of Bonn and the Beethoven-Haus museum, which now occupies the building where he was born. Donald is joined by Erica Buurman, director of the Ira F. Brilliant Center for Beethoven Studies, and together they explore some of the everyday objects and household artefacts owned by the composer to see what they can tell us about how he lived.

Composer of the Week will be returning to the story of Beethoven's life and music throughout 2020. Part of Radio 3's Beethoven Unleashed season marking the 250th anniversary of Beethoven's birth.

TUE 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (m000g4bn)

Belfast Music Society International Festival of Chamber Music 2020 (1/4)

The first of our selection of recitals from this year's Belfast Music Society International Festival of Chamber Music, recorded in the Great Hall at Queen's University in Belfast. The Dudok Quartet open this week's Lunchtime Concert series with the third of Haydn's Opus 20 set of string quartets, a collection of works which would prove incredibly influential and give the composer the title 'Father of the String Quartet'. We then welcome the trio of flautist Adam Walker, viola player Héléne Clément and harpist Agnès Clément in a performance of Debussy's Trio for Flute, Harp and Viola. Originally intended as one of six chamber works, the composer only completed three. Of the trio, Debussy once asked if it "should move us to laughter or to tears. Perhaps both?"

To complete this first programme from the festival, we welcome the celebrated Venezuelan pianist, Gabriela Montero who performs selections from Chick Corea's Children's Songs.

Presented by John Toal

Haydn: String Quartet Op. 20 No. 3

TUE 14:00 Afternoon Concert (m000g4bq)

Ulster Orchestra at Ulster Hall (2/4)

Tom McKinney continues this week of performances by The Ulster Orchestra with a concert recorded last October in Belfast.

Entitled "Songs of Love and Loss", this concert under the baton of Principal Guest Conductor Jac van Steen. It begins with Howard Skempton's first major work for orchestra, Lento - a serene, hypnotic and enigmatically simple piece based on a number of chorales.

The orchestra is then joined by soprano Katherine Broderick for a performance of Wagner's five "Wesendonck Lieder"..

Composed in 1857 for the wife of wealthy silk merchant Otto Wesendonck, with whom Wagner embarked on a tempestuous and destructive affair. The literary and soulful Mathilde Wesendonck provided the texts for these songs, while the music shows Wagner at his most vulnerable, oscillating between exuberant euphoria and delusional distress.

Elgar's second symphony was also written in a maelstrom of emotion. There was his relationship with his muse at the time, Alice Stuart-Wortley, to whom he wrote that he had "shewn my soul" in this music and the death of several close friends as well as King Edward VII, to whom the piece was dedicated. The resulting symphony demonstrates Elgar's absolute mastery of orchestral colour as it combines his private dreams and doubts in a vast and beautiful work.

The afternoon continues with a recording of The Ulster Orchestra joined by former Radio 3 New Generation Artist Annelien van Wauwe in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. It's followed by a work from Northern Irish composer Deirdre Gribbin - her 2004 violin concerto "Venus Blazing", performed by soloist Lana Trotovek under conductor David Brophy.

Home Sweet Home

Episode 2

In her series reflecting on different dimensions of home, the writer and journalist Madeleine Bunting turns her attention to homesickness. In the American Civil War, soldiers were believed to have died of it. 17th-century Swiss mercenaries were prone to it, particularly when they heard the Swiss horn played; and generations of British children were expected to toughen it out in boarding schools, where learning to endure homesickness almost became part of a national strategy.

Ulster Orchestra at Ulster Hall (3/4)

We continue this week of programmes from the Ulster Orchestra with a concert recorded last October as part of the 2019 Belfast Festival.

Roberto González-Monjas joins the orchestra to conduct Tchaikovsky's Romeo and Juliet Overture - a magical fantasy piece, based on Shakespeare's famous tragedy. One of the composer's best-loved works, this beautiful piece is now one of the most recognisable romantic melodies in the world.

The ever-popular and emotive Concierto de Aranjuez is brought to life by guest guitarist Rafael Aguirre Miñarro. Many people's first encounter with this beautiful Spanish piece may have been linked to the 1996 film Brassed Off!

To close the concert - Ravel's orchestration of Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition. Inspired by a visit to an exhibition of the composer's friend Viktor Hartmann, each of the movements representing one of the drawings or artworks on display.

Beethoven Unleashed: Mass in C and Symphony No 4

From the Bridgewater Hall, Manchester, presented by Tom Redmond.

Omer Meir Wellber brings the Dresden Kammerchor to Manchester for a performance of Beethoven's Mass in C. It was written at the same time Beethoven worked on his Fourth Symphony, the work in the first half of our concert, and commissioned by Prince Nikolaus Esterhazy II for his wife, Maria von Lichtenstein's name day. Haydn's last six masses had been penned for the same annual event in Eisenstadt and Beethoven was aware of following in his footsteps. Struggling to meet the deadline he even sent the Prince a sick-note from his doctor when he appeared to be behind in his work. Sadly this remarkable setting of the mass, in which Beethoven proudly said he "treated the text as seldom treated before", left the Prince cold and he described it in a letter as "unbearably ridiculous and detestable". Opening the concert is Beethoven's Fourth Symphony; an unusually searching slow introduction leads us into a work of unstoppable momentum and characteristic contrast.

Episode 3

In the third part of her series, the writer and journalist Madeleine Bunting explores what it means to have no place to call home. An estimated 70 million people around the world are believed to be homeless - and millions more live in such poor accommodation that in practical terms, they too fall into that category. Madeleine recalls her own experience of homelessness as a child and how her mother, trying to make a home for her children in someone else's basement, was given new hope by a passing traveller woman.

Beethoven Unleashed: At Home

Walking Stick and Writing Desk

Donald Macleod explores Beethoven's personal possessions with Erica Buurman. Today, they see how two disparate and everyday objects shine a light on the composer's creative process.

This week, Donald Macleod takes us to Beethoven's home town of Bonn and the Beethoven-Haus Museum which now occupies the building where he was born. Donald is joined by Erica Buurman, director of the Ira F. Brilliant Center for Beethoven Studies, and together they explore some of the everyday objects and household artefacts owned by the composer to see what they can tell us about how he lived.

Composer of the Week will be returning to the story of Beethoven's life and music throughout 2020. Part of Radio 3's Beethoven Unleashed season marking the 250th anniversary of Beethoven's birth.

Opera Matinee: Peter Heise's The King and the Marshall

Presented by Tom McKinney.

Peter Heise's 1850 opera 'Drot og Marsk' is based on the 13th-century true story of the murder of Danish king Eric Glipping. The king is an inveterate womaniser and when he seduces Ingeborg, the wife of Marshal Stig, the marshal organises a conspiracy to kill him. Stig is banished and Ingeborg commits suicide.

This version was recorded last May by the Royal Danish Opera Chorus and Orchestra under the baton of Michael Schønwanadt, accompanying a cast including Peter Lodahl as King Erik, Johann Reuter as Marshall Stig and Sine Bundgaard as Ingeborg.

The opera is followed by more from this week's featured performing group - The Ulster Orchestra. Rafael Payare conducts Shostakovich's Festive Overture, which was written to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the October Revolution in Russia. They close with Webern's orchestration of Bach's Ricercar from The Musical Offering presented to Frederick the Great in 1747.

Episode 4

The writer and journalist Madeleine Bunting continues her series with an exploration of a concept that can be both deeply personal and highly political. She reflects on the dramatic new significance 'homeland' took on in the wake of the 9/11 attacks in New York, when President George W Bush created the Department of Homeland Security. And she offers some fascinating glimpses of how indigenous Australians treat their homeland in a way which turns Western perceptions of the idea on its head.

Belfast Music Society International Festival of Chamber Music 2020 (4/4)

The final programme in our series of recitals from this year's Belfast Music Society International Festival of Chamber Music, recorded in the Great Hall at Queen's University in Belfast.

In this concert we hear performances from the trio of flautist Adam Walker, viola player H  l  ne Cl  ment and harpist Agn  s Cl  ment with Ravel's Sonatine, in an arrangement by the French harpist and pianist Carlos Salzedo. They follow this with a group of pieces from Prokofiev's ballet Romeo and Juliet. The Dudok Quartet return with arrangements of two Brahms choral songs. And, to complete these recitals, a new commission from the festival written by Irish composer Rhona Clarke, Seen From Above, written for the trio.

Presented by John Toal.

FRI 14:00 Afternoon Concert (m000g46z)

Ulster Orchestra at Ulster Hall (4/4)

Tom McKinney brings this week of performances by the Ulster Orchestra to a close.

They begin with a concert recorded in Belfast last June which saw conductor Oliver Zeffman making his debut with the orchestra. The concert opens with the overture to Borodin's opera Prince Igor, which Alexander Glazunov completed from Borodin's sketches following the composer's sudden death. It's followed by an arrangement of Tchaikovsky's violin and piano piece 'Souvenir d'un lieu cher', which itself was arranged for violin and orchestra by Glazunov. This arrangement for cello and orchestra is by Daniel M  ller-Schott, who is also the soloist.

This concert concludes with the orchestral suite Ravel made from his five-movement piano duet piece Mother Goose, completed in 1910.

The afternoon continues with two highlights from another concert given in Belfast last November. This time, conductor Daniele Rustioni takes to the podium for Richard Strauss's epic tone poem Don Juan. His version of the tale focuses on someone looking for, but never finding, his idealised vision of love, and the work proceeds via a series of climaxes and disappointments, ending in the protagonist's death in a duel. The orchestra's leader Tam  s Kocsis then turns soloist in a performance of Alban Berg's most popular work - his Violin Concerto. Following the death of Alma Mahler's daughter Manon, the concerto was dedicated to her - 'to the Memory of an Angel' - and its highly wrought tragedy ultimately is not only a sublime memorial to Manon, but also Berg himself, who died before the piece was premi  red. Bach's chorale 'Es ist genug! Herr wenn es Dir gef  llt' (It is enough! Lord, if it pleases You) shapes this monument to the complexity of human life.

Beat Beethoven: Live from Salford

Katie Derham is joined by the BBC Philharmonic for a very special performance of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, conducted by Ben Gernon, to raise money for Sport Relief.

BBC Radio 3 and Sport Relief are challenging members of the public to attempt to "beat" the music of Beethoven's epic Fifth Symphony, performed live by the orchestra. Hundreds of people - from complete beginners to seasoned sprinters - will don their trainers to try and run five kilometres by the time the performance ends, letting the music fuel their feet as they race around Salford's MediaCityUK.

Feeling inspired? You can Beat Beethoven wherever and whenever you like this month by staging your own fundraising 5K in your local park (or on a treadmill). Use this show or a special download of the music from BBC Sounds, which will be made available shortly after the event. Just search BBC Sounds for "Beat Beethoven".

For more information go to bbc.co.uk/beatbeethoven, where you can also get training ideas, fundraising tips and the T&Cs.

Romanticism's Last Stand

In the last decade of the nineteenth century, musical Romanticism was breathing its last, reaching heights of passion that would deliver some of the most moving music in history. Written two years apart, both Arnold Schoenberg and Oskar Fried's responses to Richard Dehmel's well-known poem on love's power to transform and transcend share a lushness and warmth that could only have come from 1890s Vienna. That was the time and place where Schoenberg met his hero,

Johannes Brahms, and soon decided to rework a Brahms piano quartet known for its good-natured energy and drive.

Lehár's Tone Poem Fieber for tenor and orchestra, written during World War I, sets words by Erwin Weill describing the hallucinations of a dying soldier. Tenor Stuart Skelton makes a welcome return to the BBC SO to perform this extraordinary and heart-rending delve into Romanticism's last stand. Edward Gardner conducts.

Episode 5

In the final episode of her series, the writer and journalist Madeleine Bunting asks what the home of the future may look like. As cyberspace colonizes more of our living space, are we in for a dystopian nightmare - one where we have almost no reason to leave our homes because everything we need and care about is there at the touch of a button? Or can new ways of living together give the idea of a cosy and convivial home a new lease of life?

Echo. Echo.. Echo...

Verity Sharp explores the echo chambers of adventurous music. Including the first recorded use of artificial reverb from the bathroom of Bill Putnam, founder of one of America's first independent recording studios, Universal Recording in Chicago. Bill turned his bathroom into a makeshift echo chamber to record an instrumental ballad with a trio of harmonica players in 1912. And the world's longest reverb time, recorded in a disused oil container in the Scottish highlands by Trevor Cox, Professor of Acoustic Engineering.

Plus more music recorded in bathrooms, some innovative tape loop manipulation and an improvised track between a trumpeter and some unexpected reverb.
